ABOUT

I love innovation and creating things. Over the years I've expanded my passion into strategy development, research and writing. My work bridges startups, corporate systems, and social change. I've worked across 30+ countries with hundreds of companies and startups on product development and business transformation. My research interests lie in decentralized innovation models. My writing often draws from real-world consulting and original research, exploring what it takes to drive change within systems that resist it. I also write when scattered observations line up and form a question I can't shake.
